

Workshop on the Study of Modern Greek Jewry

Netherlands Institute at Athens

Series of lectures on

Jews in Greece and the Netherlands:
The Shoah, restoration and rehabilitation

Thursday, 17 May 2018

11 Makri Street, 117 42 Athens, 6 p.m.

Dienke Hondius

Mapping hiding places in Amsterdam: Jewish testimonies on hiding, survival, and the postwar years

During the Shoah, Jews in Amsterdam have used many locations as hiding places. In testimonies, survivor narratives have addressed hiding experiences and memories individually. Testimony collections provide new knowledge and insight into the patterns and trends about hiding. The lecture shows first results and discusses the potential of the “spatial turn” in historical studies with regard to hiding histories.

Discussant: Alexandra Patrikiou (Jewish Museum of Greece)

Dienke Hondius (d.g.hondius@vu.nl) is Assistant Professor of History at Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam, and staff member of the Anne Frank House. She has published extensively in the broad field of Holocaust Studies and Anti-Semitism on the one hand, and on race, racism and slavery studies on the other. She is the author of Return: Holocaust Survivors and Dutch Anti-Semitism (Westport, Conn., 2003), and has co-authored Dutch New York Histories: Connecting African, Native American and Slavery Heritage (Volendam, 2017), part of the “Mapping Slavery” research project that she initiated at Vrije Universiteit in 2012. “Mapping Hiding Places” is her new research project, intended to build maps with information about locations where Jews hid during the Shoah in the Netherlands and in other countries.

The lecture is open to the public. Please register in advance with the Institute’s secretariat; nia@nia.gr, tel. 210-9210760

Η διάλεξη είναι ανοικτή στο κοινό με απαραίτητη την προεγγραφή στη γραμματεία του Ινστιτούτου. nia@nia.gr, τηλ. 210-9210760