The documentary 1,000 Square Meters of Time by award-winning Greek film maker Maro Anastopoulou follows archaeologists of the Geraki Project in their investigations of an ancient acropolis in Southern Greece. The film pictures the interactions between foreign academics and modern villagers through an anthropological, sometimes philosophical and poetic lens. Pertinent questions arise about the practicing of 'community archaeology' and 'ownership' of the past. Who writes 'the script'? Who are the observers and who the observed? The screening of the documentary will be followed by a Q&A with the film maker and members of the Geraki Project.

Admission is free of charge, but a reservation is required. Please mail m.s.moolenburgh2@student.vu.nl for reservations and more information about the exact location.
